What thoughts and feelings come up when you look at our Katchka vase? It was precisely this play in interpretation that we wanted to express. Some people see a little duck in a playful way, while others see something very childlike. The selected materiality of sand also means that the object carries a sensitive experience that we associate with nature. The arrangement and composition of the flowers that find their place in the vase also convey this freedom. The result is an interaction of flowers and vase that harmonize and shine together. It is precisely this game that encourages us to take a closer look, take our time and be in the moment.
